not a religion as known among the Bectarians of the world, yet it leads men to that height of living that has been declared to be "pure and undefiled religion." The order has prospered, and the practice of its principles are destined to keep it for all time, as it has been for more than three-quarters of a century, the greatest mutual beneficial organization of the world, and an example for all other organizations to copy.

If there is one thing more than another for the good of the order, it is the occasional open meeting into which the public may be lavited, not to listen to the music of the band or merely to feart the eye upon the glitter of our paraphermalia, but to receive the valuable information which well-informed representatives of its principles have to impart, and also, which a community ought to know, for the satisfaction, if nothing more, of being assured that though the institution is a secret one, it nevertheless is worthy of public confidence and respectful consideration.

The number on hand was fair. No business of importance transpired, except the election of grand lodge officers.
Enterprise lodge No. 15, on same evening held a protracted session, there being matters on hand of importance to the lodge. The business was disposed of satisfactorily to the members, and after election, the lodge closed.

Utah boige No. 1 assembled together on their regular meeting night. Thursday, and with quite a number present had an interesting session. Members discoursed various topics, and listened to reports of committees, who are preparing anniversary exercises. The programme for that occasion will prove a drawing card for Odd Fellows in the city. No. 1 honors her old members in Fidelity lodge No. 17 is strong in her order, Fidelity lodge No. 17 is strong in her youth, and the members are earnest workers for the cause they champion. The meeting on Friday was no exception to the rule, that is, always something to interest and instruct the members and leave them to think of the privileges and duties of the order.

Jordan lodge No. 3 had an interesting session on Thursday. The degree staff had considerable practice in degree work and did well, all interested taking their parts satisfactorily. The lodge expects to materially increase in numbers this spring, as brothers are working to that end.

The national commander is very enturing and had a big attendance of members and some visitors. The beautified work was placed on the floor and won praise from all beholders. There are many bright women in No. 5 who know how to make the meetings profitable. Cheerful faces and happy hearts are possessed by these followers of the order.

National lodge No. 1 mosts next Saturday. There is some talk in Repekah circles about asking the soverign grand lodge to appoint another committee to revise the revised Rebekah ritual at its next session, but it is safe to say at this time that the soverign grand lodge will not listen to such a request. The members of that body do not intend to admit their mistake or blunder made at the session in Dallas, Tex. and the presentation in Grand Army matters, and the presentation he made of the value of union in influence and action by the comrades in the welfare of local posts, is already having its effect. Several applications for new membership have been made and delinquent comrades are placing themselves in gool standing.

A regular meeting of the George R. Maxwell W. R. C. of the G. A. R. will be held Wednesday afternoon next. Members will all, please, be present, as they will hold a short memorial service. The work next week will also be performed by Enterprise Friday evening, owing to the lecture which will be given at the meeting of Ontario Wednesday by Dr. Livingstone of Salt Lake, on his experiences with Lieutenant Peary's Arctic expedition. Judge Arnoid will also have something to say under "good of the order." Friday evening at Enterprise representatives were elected to the grand lodge, which meets at Boise City May 19. They are: L. E. Camonile, F. C. Medonald, W. H. Colbath and Rev. Bert Foster.

At the meeting of Ontario last Wednesday evening, James G. Watson resigned as financier, and C. A. Ormiston was elected in his place.

Park City lodge No. 7, I. O. O. F., was quite busy Monday night conferring the third degree on seven candidates. Two applications were received. Henry Wiest, Thomas Jones and T. J. If he could yarn a little about his stake of $36,000 being obtained as blood stake of $36,000 being obtained as blood money on some adventurous cruise, the scrapping tar might prove a good subject for a nautical story teller to transfer to his briny pages. But Sharkey acknowledges that his $36,000 was all made within a roped space 24 feet square, a remarkably small field of money making for a man who has sailed into almost every port of the world. Scraps of experience from the life of the man who will amuse an audience tonight, show that he ran away from home in Ireland when only 9 years of age. He shipped aboard a stout three-master for a long run around the Cape for Calcutta. Glimpses of the strange ways prevailing in Hindoostan sharpened his appetite for other quarters after the roving Irish lad got back home. He rested from the hard bouts that make up a life on the forecastle and then shipped on a merchantman for Sydney, Australia. Lured from his berth by the tales of the gold fields and the bush, he deserted and took up blacksmithing. This innovation was followed for a time and then he knocked about for two years, doing odds and ends. The landlubber was too slow, so Sharkey forsook the shore for the water, which he has always considered his natural element.

Varied luck came during the intervals of seven years upon the water.

When sent aloft in the mernings the foretop men had to break the ice from the lookout, and it was while engaged in this dangerous task that Sharkey froze his fingers and toes, the hiting frost marks still appearing on these members in white streaks of calloused cuticle.

"I have fixed myself for comfort now," he said last night, and as he made the remark there flashed in the eye a diamond of ever so many karats, a massive gold watch lay in a broad paim and an artfully carved gold matchbox offered the starters for the proffered cigar. Sharkey has saited his money away, and besides this evidence of substantial worth, he possesses trophies valued at great sums, among them being a belt presented to him by officers and men of the American navy, appraised at $22,000.

Field Marshal Woiseley evidently believes in the old adage about popular songs. He has written a preface to "The Soldiers' Song Book," just published in London which contains 24 favorite army baliads, selected by regimental adjutants. Woiseley says that troops "who sing as they march gill not only reach their destination more quickly and in better fighting condition than those that march in silence but, inspired by the music and words of national songs, will feel that self-confidence which is the mother of victory."

The British national gallery has just received the addition of a picture by Millais whose work until now has been unrepresented at Trafalgar square. The picture is "The Yoeman of the Guard," that famous study of an ancient tower warder, wearing the quaintly picturesque uniform of brilliant scarlet and gold and the curiously shaped black hat. It was first shown at the academy of 1877, and afterwards at the Paris exhibition of 1878, where it was largely instrumental in gaining for the painter one of the coveted medals of honor, which were awarded to only two English artists, Millais and Herkomer, The "Yoeman of the Guard" was bequeathed to the nation by Mrs. Hodgkinson, a relative of Sir John Millais.
